The faces of the four American presidents carved into the granite of Mount Rushmore seem timeless, but they have adorned the location for only 75 years. After

Upon seeing Mount Rushmore, sculptor Gutzon Borglum exclaimed, "America will march along that skyline."

Congress authorized the Mount Rushmore National Memorial Commission on March 3, 1925, President Calvin Coolidge insisted that the site should highlight 130 years of American history, presenting the country's first president, George Washington, along with a Democrat and two Republicans. Besides Washington, sculptor Gutzon Borglum chose Thomas Jefferson, Abraham Lincoln and Theodore Roosevelt on the basis that they preserved the Republic and expanded its territory. Borglum and a crew of 100 workers began work on October 4, 1927 and finished fourteen years later, on October 31, 1941. Since its completion, Mount Rushmore has become South Dakota's top tourist attraction, with over two million visitors per year.
